How to start teaching your subject online on Preply, from a tutor with 14,000+ lessons taught.

By Tu Nombre

Who I am and why I wrote this guide

I have taught more than 14,000 online lessons on Preply. Today I earn between $4,000 and $6,000 a month teaching, but I didn't start there: it took time to learn what makes a student book, stay and recommend you.

What I learned doesn't depend on the subject. A strong profile, a well-thought-out price and a convincing trial lesson work the same way in math, music, chemistry or coding.

Preply is growing beyond languages and is looking for tutors in other subjects. That's why I wrote this guide: so you don't have to learn everything by trial and error like I did.

My income is my personal case, not a promise. Every tutor's results depend on their subject, effort and the market.

- [x] Professional photo: facing the camera, good light, clean background, smiling.
- [x] Specific headline. Instead of "Math teacher", write "Algebra & SAT Math: 10 years helping teens pass with confidence".
- [x] A 60–90 second video: who you are, who you help, what your lessons look like and an invitation to book.
- [x] A student-focused description: what problem you solve and what result they'll get.
- [x] An open calendar with plenty of hours, especially in your first weeks.
- [x] Reply to messages fast. Students often book whoever answers first.

3 mistakes that hold new tutors back

1

A generic profile

If your profile could belong to anyone, nobody picks you. Be specific about who you help.

2

A poorly planned price

Don't give your time away, and don't charge expert rates with no reviews. Price is built in stages.

3

Improvising the trial lesson

The trial lesson is your sales moment. It needs structure: diagnosis, a quick win and a plan.
